POL 400: SHAKO! Strategic Overview For Player and General Information
General Information	SHAKO! is a turn-based strategy game for 2-4 players. It is based on the traditional Japanese board game Shogi (将棋). The game features a variety of units, including foot soldiers, cavalry, and archers, each with unique abilities and movement patterns. The objective is to capture the enemy's King (Shiro) or to force the enemy into a corner where they cannot escape. The game is played on a 10x10 board with various terrain types, such as hills, forests, and rivers, which affect unit movement and visibility.
Gameplay	SHAKO! uses a turn-based system. Each player takes turns moving their units. Units can move one square at a time, either horizontally, vertically, or diagonally. Some units have special abilities, such as the ability to jump over other units or to move multiple squares. Units can also attack other units, either by capturing them or by dealing damage. The game ends when one player's King is captured or when a player is forced into a corner where they cannot escape.
Units	SHAKO! features a variety of units, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Foot Soldiers: The most basic unit, used for general combat. Cavalry: Faster than foot soldiers, but less durable. Archers: Can attack units from a distance, but have limited range. Knights: Can move two squares at a time, but are slower than foot soldiers. Generals: The most powerful unit, used for capturing the King. Support Units: Used for healing and providing bonuses to other units.
Strategy	SHAKO! requires careful planning and strategy. Players must consider the movement and attack patterns of their own units and those of their opponents. They must also take into account the terrain of the board, as some units are faster on certain types of terrain than others. The game also features a variety of terrain types, such as hills, forests, and rivers, which affect unit movement and visibility. Overall, the game requires a combination of quick reflexes and strategic thinking to succeed.
