Viewers of contemporary art are often invited to involve themselves actively in artworks by entering installations touching objects performing instructions or clicking on interactive websites Why have artists sought to engage spectators in these new forms of participation In what ways does active participation affect the viewer s experience and the status of the artwork Spanning a range of practices including kinetic art happenings environments performance installations relational and new media art from the 1950s to the present this critical anthology sheds light on the history and specificity of artworks that only come to life when you the viewer are invited to do it yourself Rather than a specialist topic in the history of twentieth and twenty first century art the do it yourself artwork raises broader issues concerning the role of the viewer in art the status of the artwork and the socio political relations between art and its contexts Hastings Communications and Entertainment Law Journal (Comm/Ent). ,1996 Choice ,2002 The Oriental Obscene Sylvia Shin Huey Chong,2004 Journal of Folklore Research ,2009 The Feminism and Visual Culture Reader Amelia Jones,2010 Feminism is one of the most important perspectives from which visual culture has been theorised and historicised over the past 30 years This book brings together a wide array of writings including classic texts and polemical new pieces Callaloo ,2008 A Black South journal of arts and letters Virtual Communities Felicia Wu Song,2009 Does contemporary Internet technology strengthen civic engagement and democratic practice The recent surge in online community participation has become a cultural phenomenon enmeshed in ongoing debates about the health of American civil society But observations about online communities often concentrate on ascertaining the true nature of community and democracy typically rehearsing familiar communitarian and liberal perspectives This book seeks to understand the technology on its own terms focusing on how the technological and organizational configurations of online communities frame our contemporary beliefs and assumptions about community and the individual It analyzes key structural features of thirty award winning online community websites to show that while the values of individual autonomy egalitarianism and freedom of speech dominate the discursive content of these communities the practical realities of online life are clearly marked by exclusivity and the demands of commercialization and corporate surveillance Promises of social empowerment are framed within consumer and therapeutic frameworks that undermine their democratic efficacy As a result online communities fail to revolutionize the civic landscape because they create cultures of membership that epitomize the commodification of community and public life altogether
