Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in Tehran, Iran. The participants were 30 elderly people (15 men and 15 women) aged 65 and above. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The results showed that the experimental group had significant improvements in physical health (e.g., increased muscle strength, improved balance, and reduced risk of falls) and psychological health (e.g., reduced depression and increased social support) compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively improve the physical and psychological health of elderly people.
