NOTE TO TEACHERS

Critical thinking is invaluable in the classroom. Students need to be comfortable in thinking critically naturally and easily. Costa's House of Questions is a different way of organizing higher thinking questions or Bloom's questions.

I went to a thinking unit and realized the way it organized the different levels, making it much easier for students to understand. Instead of 6 levels, there are only 3 basic levels. Level one is the lowest, level two is the middle, and level three is the highest. We should strive for most of our questions to come from levels two and three.

You can use the critical thinking stems in several different ways:

- You can create a big bulletin board, so students can reference it whenever they need.
- You can print the posters for your classroom or groups.
- You can print the cards, laminate them, and have students choose one from a hat.
- You can print out the student page with all three levels on it and have students glue it in their notebooks or laminate them.

Costas Question Stems:

Self-Determination and Collective Responsibility in the Secessionist Struggle Costas Laoutides, 2016-03-03 The often violent emergence of new independent states following the end of the Cold War generated discussion about the normative grounds of territorial separatism A number of opposing approaches surfaced debating whether and under which circumstances there is a right for a community to secede from its host country Overwhelmingly these studies placed emphasis on the right to secession and neglected the moral stance of secessionist movements as agents in international relations In this book Costas Laoutides explores the collective moral agency involved in secessionist struggles offering a theoretical model for the collective responsibility of secessionist groups Case studies on the Kurds and the people of Moldova Transdnistria illustrate the author's theoretical arguments as he seeks to establish how although the principle of self-determination was envisaged as a means of gradually bestowing political power upon the people it never managed to realize its full potential because it was interpreted strictly within a framework of exclusionary politics of identity Politics, Postmodernity, and Critical Legal Studies Costas Douzinas, Peter Goodrich, Yifat Hachamovitch, 1994 This is a unique guide to one of the most exciting developments within contemporary jurisprudence It systematically applies a critical philosophy to the substance of common law overviews its politics and cultural significance Work, Working and Work Relationships in a Changing World Clare Kelliher, Julia Richardson, 2018-12-17 This book is concerned with the rapid and varied changes in the nature of work and work relationships which have taken place in recent years While technological innovation has been a key contributor to the nature and pace of change other social and market trends have also played a part such as increasing workforce diversity enhanced competition and greater global integration Responding to these trends alongside cost pressures and the need for continued responsiveness to the environment organizations have changed the way in which work is organized There have also been shifts in product markets with growing demand for authenticity and refinement of the customer experience which has further implications for how work is organized and enacted At the same time employees have sought changes in their work arrangements in order to help them achieve a more satisfactory relationship between their work and non work lives Many have also taken increased responsibility for managing their own work opportunities moving away from dependency on a single employer The implications of these significant and widespread changes are the central focus of this book and in particular the implications for workers managers and organizations It brings together contributions from an international team of renowned management scholars who explore the opportunities and challenges presented by technological and digital innovation consumer social and organizational change Drawing on empirical evidence from Europe North America and Australia Work Working and Work Relationships in a Changing World considers new forms of service work technologically enabled work and independent professionals to provide in depth insight into work experiences in the 21st Century Diverse and Creative Voices Dieumeme Noelliste, Sung Wook

Chung,2015-04-20 As the twentieth century passed its midpoint and was rushing toward its end a growing number of Majority World theologians came to realize that they could in fact do theology in their own contexts for the benefit of their own people Thus from the 1960s onward theologians in the global South have embarked on a form of theological construction that has sometimes been described as contextual reflection or contextualized theology This volume is motivated by the conviction that these efforts have resulted in theological work that is also beneficial for Christians in other parts of the world The editors have invited Majority World theologians to share their reflections on several themes of Christian faith from their own sociohistorical perspectives but with an unswerving commitment to the authority of Scripture It is hoped that these fresh reflections will help Christians in the West engage and benefit from the perspectives of fellow believers in the global South
