When a person is in a state of stress, the body's response is to release hormones that increase the heart rate and blood pressure. This is a natural reaction to stress, but it can be harmful if it occurs frequently. The body's response to stress is a complex process involving the hypothalamus, pituitary gland, and adrenal glands. The hypothalamus sends signals to the pituitary gland, which then sends signals to the adrenal glands. The adrenal glands release hormones that increase the heart rate and blood pressure.
