

The characteristics of living things

Living things maintain a stable internal environment.

Living things obtain and use material and energy.

Taken as a group, living things create.

Living things are made up of cells.

Living things are based on a universal genetic code.

All organisms share the same DNA. They need to live, grow and reproduce. That information is passed on from one to another.

Living things grow and develop.

During development, a single fertilized egg divides again. They begin to look different from one another and to perform different functions.

Living things respond to their environment.

organisms detect and respond to change in their environment.

Living things reproduce.

Parents have similar organisms. Most, and probably all, engage in sexual reproduction. cells from two parents join to form the first cell. Assessments in which a single organism produces identical to itself.
