Resource Score

CHARTS THAT ARE (Somewhat) Different These charts are somewhat different in the way they present data, and often require a different way of thinking. These charts are not typical (presented in your business mathematics course), but they present alternative ways for representing data. They are also called "nonstandard" data charts.

1. A Bar chart with a logarithmic y-axis.

2. A Pie Chart is shown by the journal Business Week to illustrate which firms provide the most page contributions (from their website). You can see many details within a single chart.

3. A Line chart (page 200) is a performance audit chart which tracks how many "bad" days there are over a long period.

4. A "presentations matrix" (page 201) is a collection of charts.
