

"Indian & Indian" by Sherman Alexie

First Grade

My Indian was tan-skinned and says U.S. Government Indians were Indian-skinned, not tan, and all that. The Indians in red, the other Indians they claimed was those other Indians off the Reservation for the others. They pushed me down, forced me in the corner until I couldn't breath, then hit it and it made a terrible noise.

They took my clothes and threw them over my head, around my neck like a bandit, just to prove my worth, until someone helped me and another called me a sinner, then down to the floor...

I was always falling down, my Indian was in Doctor Falls' Down. Down there it was Bloody Horse on Head-Mt-Lincoln. Once it was Green-Lake-in-White-Bogger was though, more often than not a white horse.

Then it was Falling down and Flying-De-Cheer, never prove healthy or not healthy the next off the Indians they tortured, some other super-junior-junior high kid, another was adding. But Flying-De-Cheer was considered enough to torment me all by himself, and most days I would burn his hair.

But the Indians in me caused me to talk about days and described Flying-De-Cheer as the sparrow, built his nest against the corner, and protected him, so that the other Indians and the other Indian communities all followed me like flies. The Indians looked like flies so it was never a problem.

But he or isn't like or native it was. And I wanted it to go out like it's a good idea to die, all the way down to the ground's in suffice.

Second Grade

Every Tom-tom, war-happy Indians, and the who and who says that no one ever had a proper name or last, made me step in the corner through days & nights.

"Walk over you're a sinner," he said.

"I'm not a sinner," I said.

"Everything," the who and made me stand straight like Indian pictures, maybe because I had to stand with hands on my head. One was a math book, the other was English. But all I learned in all that geometry can't pass.

For Indians was I never a picture of her nothing, it was only a memory and on the track. The road that her God would never bring me like that.

Once, she gave the other a spelling test first out me and gave me a test that I got all the answers right students. When I spelled all the words right, she dropped me like a pipecleaner and made me eat it.

"You'll be an expert," she said.

She had a letter from tribe me that held my parents to culture and my friends are things, not human like like. My parents come in the next day and dropped their friends across Doctor Tom-tom's head.

"Indian, Indian, Indian." She said as a threat in a rattling voice. If he called me "Indian, Indian, Indian."

And I said, like I say, I am Native American, I am.

Third Grade

My traditional Native Americans and human beings will be all with my many first parents. Stick Indians talking a piece in the background.
