six years in Sancha a small farming village in the mountains north of Beijing which changes dramatically after the local road is paved and the capital's auto boom brings new tourism Finally he turns his attention to urban China researching development over a period of more than two years in Lishui a small southeastern city where officials hope that a new government built expressway will transform a farm region into a major industrial center Peter Hessler whom The Wall Street Journal calls one of the Western world's most thoughtful writers on modern China deftly illuminates the vast shifting landscape of a traditionally rural nation that having once built walls against foreigners is now building roads and factory towns that look to the outside world Hessler's genius has always been in his wry commentary and ability to transcribe the rhythms of his environment onto the page From this cast of thousands emerges a picture of great hopes tinged with sadness at what is being cast aside without second thought The Wall Street Journal A fascinating road trip through a land in transition Hessler's description of China's new drivers is hilarious Country Driving tells us as much about contemporary China even when Hessler is not on the road The Christian Science Monitor
