process and the spread route of the cobalt blue were discussed base on the composition analysis The research includes the X ray fluorescence XRF experiments and the ancient literature analysis The chemical composition of the cobalt blue pigment was obtained by the XRF examination and then the mineral of raw cobalt ores and further its provenance was discussed The manufacture process and the trading route of the cobalt blue were also discussed through comparing the previous scholars blue ceramics and glasses results and analyzing the ancient literature Based on the scientific experiments the seven groups of cobalt blue for Islamic ceramics and glasses were summarized Each of the groups has the distinctive compositiona] distribution Meanwhile there are two main cobalt sources for Islamic ceramics and glasses in history which are Persian Kashan sulaimani and German Schneeberg smalt Most of the blue groups were originated from the two main cobalt sources The different compositional distribution is due to the different manufacture processes The cobalt blue of Chinese blue and white porcelain was depended on import in the early period However the imported cobalt blue could not meet the demand when the Chinese blue and white porcelain industry rose in the is century The manufacture had to use the Chinese local cobalt ores since the is century
