

LEARN TO CODE WITH PYTHON

Discover the joy of coding with our beginner's guide to Python 3 on Raspberry Pi

by Phil King

In this month's course, we'll take you through the key principles of Python programming on Raspberry Pi.

For this guide, we'll be doing all our coding in the Thonny IDE (Integrated Development Environment) on Raspberry Pi OS. As IDE is a program that is used to create other programs, the IDE creates programs in any text editor, but using an IDE makes life easier, especially for beginners.

From the desktop applications menu, select Programming > Thonny. The Thonny IDE opens up to a simple text editor. Using the top bar, we have icons including Load, Save, Run, and Stop.

Let's write some code

The first point is where you will write your first Python code. In the bottom of the shell panel where you'll see output and any error messages resulting from a running program.

Let's write some code!

For our first program, we'll print a message to the shell. This is the window at the bottom of Thonny that displays the results (or output) of our programs. It's tradition to welcome a new programming language by printing "Hi my name is Python!"

In the main Thonny panel, we first add the following Python code:

print("Hello, World!")

The double quotes are used to include a text message (known as a string). Click the Run icon and Thonny will run and print the message to the shell. Try changing the text between the double quotes and executing it to see a different message.

Thonny will not compile or run the program until you click the Run icon.

You can save the program by clicking Save and entering hello_world.py in the Name field.

You must be careful of spaces in your filename as they will not work.

Data types and maths operators

In our hello_world.py program, we printed a string of text. Other data types in Python include integers (whole numbers, such as 1, 2, and 3) and floating-point numbers (numbers with a point, such as 1.5 or 34.52).

To create these, we need the double quote in our python statements. Click Run to start a new program and save.

WHY PYTHON?

There are lots of different programming languages around but Python is by far the most popular for beginners. Here are the reasons why you should probably choose Python as your first language.

1. Easy to learn Python has a relatively simple and easy-to-read syntax.
2. Python is versatile Python can be used for a wide range of applications, from web development to data science and artificial intelligence.
3. Large and active community Python has a large and active community of developers who contribute to its development. This community ensures that there are many resources available for learning and troubleshooting.
4. Open source Python is an open-source language, which means that the source code is freely available for anyone to use, modify, and distribute.
5. Follows best practices Code written in Python tends to follow best practices, including PEP8 (Python Enhancement Proposal), which is a set of guidelines for writing clean and readable code.

Other languages offer advantages, and we will look at Python in a great piece to read.

Tip

Save your program.

Python programs are typically saved as .py files. Make sure you save your code with the correct extension. Python programs are saved as .py files.
