Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of 30 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic exercise. The control group remained sedentary. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and EE of the subjects. The HR increased from 68 to 72 beats per minute at rest and from 148 to 152 beats per minute during exercise. The EE increased from 1.2 to 1.4 kcal per minute at rest and from 3.2 to 3.4 kcal per minute during exercise. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

These authors also found that the more the patient is involved in the decision-making process, the more the patient is satisfied with the decision. This finding is consistent with the findings of other studies that have shown that patient participation in decision-making is associated with higher patient satisfaction and adherence to treatment (e.g., [10, 11]).
