

2. Classification of Accounts. It refers to classifying the costs under a suitable accounting heading. This facilitates quick identification and collection of expenses, their analysis and in prompt reporting. As was explained under chapter 2, costs can be classified on the basis of number of characteristics. Having classified, it is desirable to give a code number for each heading of cost. For example, raw materials may be given a code number from 0 to 10, direct labour cost 11 to 20 factory overheads 21 to 30 and so on. This results in convenience in dealing with costs and ensures secrecy.
3. Determination of Duration. This refers to the period for which standard are used. It may be a short or long duration.
4. Determination of Capacity. It refers to fixation of standard output for the sake of fixing fixed and variable overheads.
5. Types of Standard. It refers to the level of attainment accepted by management as the basis on which standard costs are determined. The following are the important types of standards.
  - (a) Basic or fixed or static standard: It is defined by the ICMA terminology as "a standard established for use over a long period from which a current standard can be developed. These standards remain constant for a long period of time and hence they are also termed as long-term standards. They show the trend over a period of time relating to material prices, labour rates, effects of changing methods. They serve at the most as the statistical data and is not used to evaluate current efficiency or inefficiency.
  - (b) Ideal standard: It is defined by the ICMA terminology as "a standard which can be attained under the most favourable conditions". Such standards are based on the best possible operating conditions. In other words, the productive activity is carried out assuming that there are no breakdown in machineries, no wastage in materials, no idle time. This standard, while using is revised periodically to reflect improvement in methods, materials and technology. It is difficult to attain ideal standard in practice and hence rarely used. Therefore, such standards are used for the purpose of investigation and development but not for controlling day-to-day activities.
  - (c) Attainable or expected or practical standard: It is defined by the ICMA terminology as "a standard which can be attained if a standard unit of work is carried out efficiently, a machine properly operated or materials properly used. This is most widely used in practice. This standard is based on efficient operating condition though not a perfect condition. This standard covers allowances for normal material wastages, for fatigue, machine breakdown, etc. This standard is more realistic in nature and hence used for cost control, valuing stock and a basis for budgeting.
  - (d) Current standard: It is defined by the ICMA terminology as "a standard established for use over a short period of time related to current conditions". This standard is used to reflect the current condition. It can be equated to attainable standard during the period of stable prices and normal conditions.
  - (e) Normal standard: It is defined by the ICMA terminology as "the average standard which it is anticipated can be attained over a future period of time, preferably, long enough to cover one trade cycle". Accordingly, this standard may be prepared once in 10 years.

STANDARD HOUR

It is a measure used in standard costing by means of which products in different forms such as solid, liquid and gases are measured. The standard hour is the quantity of output or amount of work which should be produced in one hour. In other words, a standard hour is the expression of the actual output in terms of standard time instead of units. The ICMA terminology defines it as "a hypothetical unit pre-established to represent the amount of work which should be performed in one hour under standard performance". The concept of standard hour has a practical advantage in the measurement of efficiency ratio, activity ratio of an organisation.
