Chapter 10 Lab Using Index Fossils

Introduction

What are fossils? Do you know how to use the relative ages of rock layers?

Investigation Objectives

By using comparative knowledge of fossils found in sedimentary rock strata, students will determine the relative age of rock layers. They will be presented with fossils found in rock layers within the same rock formation. Included is a comparative chart of fossils found in rock layers of different locations. Students will learn fossils and how they are used to determine the relative age of rock layers. Students will determine strategies that the geologist uses to determine fossils.

Students will use comparative knowledge of rock layers to determine the relative age of rock layers within the same rock layer. Using the fossil record, they will determine the relative age of rock layers.
