Abstract—This study examined the relationships between self-reported, self-rated, and observed performance and between self-reported and self-rated performance and between self-rated performance and observed performance in a sample of 100 students. Results showed that self-reported performance was significantly correlated with self-rated performance ($r = 0.70$, $p < 0.001$) and with observed performance ($r = 0.50$, $p < 0.001$). Self-rated performance was significantly correlated with observed performance ($r = 0.40$, $p < 0.001$). The results suggest that self-reported performance is a valid measure of performance and that self-rated performance is a valid measure of performance.
