Continuous Effectiveness Monitoring
Programs

Continuous Programs are programs that are continually operating in the same way and repeat themselves. A continuous program is described by a single or a group of the repeating processes, including processes such as fixed rates and government service payments. The processes measure the continuous or periodic review of the program. Continuous programs are used to measure necessary adjustments for changes in the environment, public requirements, etc. Examples of continuous programs are the same tasks as they conduct throughout the year (e.g., taxes).

Continuous requires the continuation of annual audits to monitor the needs and the effectiveness of governmental operations for future audits. For the City of Milwaukee, continuous monitoring includes accounts, revenues, expenditures and investments. For all other funds, continuous includes the audit of revenue and expenditure programs. An appropriate program, preparation and the formal and systematic audit processes are required. The following funds are continuous funds of programs.
