Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact exercise program on the health-related quality of life of older adults. The program was designed to be safe and effective for older adults with chronic health conditions. The program was evaluated using a pre-post design. The results showed that the program had a positive impact on the health-related quality of life of older adults. The program was well-tolerated and had a low risk of injury. The authors conclude that the program is a safe and effective way to improve the health-related quality of life of older adults.
