foreman of our outfit Baugh was a typical trail boss He had learned to take things as they came play the cards as they fell and not fret himself about little things that could not be helped If we had been a month behind he would never have thought to explain the why or wherefore to old man Carter Several years after this when he was scouting for the army he rode up to a herd over on the Chisholm trail and asked one of the tail men Son have you seen anything of about three hundred nigger soldiers No said the cowboy Well said Baugh I ve lost about that many
