coleoids change the appearance to blend in with its surroundings.

All coleoids have a brain and eight nerves with muscles. (Contract and expand also have two nerves.) Coleoids also have a large sheet of muscle (protecting their body). This muscle is called a muscle. It contains their heart, gills, stomach, and other organs. Perhaps the most interesting part of their body is their skin. Coleoid skin can change its color, pattern, and texture in an instant. This amazing skill is the result of special cells, controlled by these muscles and nerves. These cells are arranged in four layers. Changes in different layers lead to a huge number of colors, patterns, and textures. Different kinds of coleoids have different combinations of these cells.

The cells in the first layer are proteins in a gelatin with red, orange, yellow, brown, or black. Special muscles cause each cell to get longer or shorter. When the muscle relaxes, it will be stretch, the result is a longer area of color; when they shrink a cell, the result is less color. Those muscles have an amazing amount of control over the cells. They can expand one cell longer and the one right next to it shorter. The second layer of cells reflects light. These cells produce strong greens, blues, purples, and others. Creating the Opportunity to Learn A. Wade Boykin,Pedro Noguera,2011-09-08 Unless we believe that those who have more are inherently superior to those who have less we should be troubled by the fact that patterns of achievement are often fairly predictable particularly with respect to students race and class In Creating the Opportunity to Learn Wade Boykin and Pedro Noguera help navigate the turbid waters of evidence based methodologies and chart a course toward closing and eliminating the academic achievement gap Turning a critical eye to current and recent research the authors present a comprehensive view of the achievement gap and advocate for strategies that contribute to the success of all children Boykin and Noguera maintain that it is possible to close the achievement gap by abandoning failed strategies learning from successful schools and simply doing more of what the research shows is most effective Success is founded on equity but equity involves more than simply ensuring students have equal access to education equity also entails a focus on outcomes and results If we want to bring about significant improvements in those outcomes we have to do more to address the context in which learning takes place In short we must create schools where a child s race or class is no longer a predictor for how well he or she might perform
