How Invention Begins John H. Lienhard,2006-07-14 In How Invention Begins Lienhard reconciles the ends of invention with the individual leaps upon which they are built illuminating the vast web of individual inspirations that lie behind whole technologies He traces for instance the way in which thousands of people applied their combined inventive genius to airplanes railroad engines and automobiles As he does so it becomes clear that a collective desire an upwelling of fascination a spirit of the times a Zeitgeist laid its hold upon inventors The thing they all sought to create was speed itself Likewise Lienhard shows that when we trace the astonishingly complex technology of printing books we come at last to that which we desire from books the knowledge the learning that they provide Can we speak of speed or education as inventions To do so he concludes is certainly no greater a stretch than it is to call radio or the telephone an invention Throughout this marvelous volume Lienhard illuminates these webs of insight or inspiration by weaving a fabric of anecdote history and technical detail all of which come together to provide a full and satisfying portrait of the true nature of invention      Caxton's Morte

Darthur Takako Kato,2002 Revisiting the fundamental texts of Sir Thomas Malory's Morte Darthur the Winchester manuscript and William Caxton's printed edition and investigating what happened in Caxton's workshop are the best ways of discovering what Malory intended to write This study investigates the irregular use of paragraphs and the missing chapter divisions in Caxton's Morte and reveals frequent alterations to it in order to fit his text on the page It identifies the points at which alterations are most likely to have been made and suggests that Caxton may have consulted the Winchester manuscript while he was preparing his edition regularly with regard to textual divisions      A Bibliography of the History
