

Chapter 8: Special Issues (Checklist) pp. 226-237

8. Why did some firms that initially had no significant firm-level diversity have this transition? Explain.
- More often than not, diversity is associated with a firm's ability to compete in the marketplace. Thus, firms without diversity, either voluntary or involuntary, tend to have lower market positions and therefore may have lower profits.
9. Define the importance of other cultures of higher and low organizational and competing cultures. Why are these types often found in the same organization? Why is it necessary to understand these cultures in order to be successful in business and life?
- From this discussion, it is clear that there are two main types of cultures in the workplace: other cultures (higher or lower).
10. Explain the importance of understanding one's own culture (high or low) and that of others. Why is it important to understand one's own culture and that of others? Explain.
- One's own culture is often called one's high culture (which means one's own culture is superior). This is found in business, school, family, society, etc. However, one's own culture is not always the best or most appropriate.
11. What are "good" and "bad" cross-cultural stereotypes? Explain and give an example.
- Good cross-cultural stereotypes are those that reflect the real world. Bad cross-cultural stereotypes are those that reflect the real world but are inaccurate. For example, "Asian culture is very homogeneous" is a good stereotype because it is accurate. "Asian culture is very homogeneous" is a bad stereotype because it is inaccurate.
12. What are other cultures' traits? Explain if possible, and briefly discuss the five basic cultures.
- These global cultures reflect how society in the world reacts to particular aspects of their other cultures' behaviors. These global cultures are the Asian, American, European, African, and Latin American cultures. These global cultures are all interconnected.
13. Differentiate the Ching and Wu. Explain the following: Ching by being a strong, assertive, firm culture, Wu by being a soft, flexible, open culture. Are the Ching and Wu cultures good or bad?
