Introduction to Session Notes

It has been estimated that approximately 25% of a therapist's job is administrative. That includes recording accurate and effective session notes. Sadly, this part of the counseling experience is probably the first duty that is neglected, put off for some other time, and even more inappropriately, cheated on.

I was in a classroom setting once, and the professor started the lecture with some long, drawn out personal story that involved a number of characters, intricate information, and names that were too involved to even remember. Then, after his ten -minute introduction, he lectured for an hour. When he was done, he made an announcement. He said: "This class will change the way you function and perceive in the counseling setting. Everyone is about to fail this class today. The assignment that I am about to give you is worth 5% of your overall semester grade."

It was at that point that he asked us to recount, in writing, the whole diatribe of nonsense that he started the class with. He wanted all of the details: names, locations, narratives, and everything associated with his opening story. I didn't even turn in the assignment. I had nothing. I "zoned out" during his diatribe.

Near the end of the class, he made a simple remark that has stuck with me ever since. And it should stick with you. He said: "Is the document that you just wrote worthy of presenting to a court of law? If not, don't turn it in and take the hit."

What was the point of that exercise? His point was simple and very profound.

Legal and Ethical Issues

If you are not taking notes during a client session, there is no way that you will even remember the content of the session at the end of the session – much less remembering it tomorrow. Tomorrow is a fantasy. You will remember nothing of significant substance. What if the client sues? Commits suicide and the family sues? Do you think that is only remotely possible? Think again. You are wrong and you may be exposing yourself to legal liability unnecessarily.
