

Chapter 7 Study Guide

In Chapter 7 we study Activity-Based Costing (ABC) which is a more sophisticated and accurate way of applying overhead based on activities used in the manufacture of a product. ABC is very helpful in making internal managerial decisions. It is important to know the most accurate overhead to determine the most accurate cost of a product—so that focus can be on manufacturing the most profitable products—and pricing decisions can be made with the best possible accounting information.

A common problem with using traditional overhead costing with one predetermined overhead rate is that some products (usually high-volume basic, standard products) are likely to be overcosted and therefore overpriced. More importantly, lower-volume more unique, delicate products (requiring modifications) are likely to be undercosted, and therefore underpriced. So the company would be losing money on their unique or delicate products, and not even know it if they are using simplified traditional methods of applying overhead.

1. Edders Corporation uses an activity-based costing system with three activity cost pools. The company has provided the following data concerning its costs and its activity-based costing system:

Costs
Wages and salaries	$ 217,000
Depreciation	207,000
Rentals	119,000
Total	$ 533,000

Distribution of resource consumption

	Activity Cost Pools
	Allocation	Marketing	Design	Total
Wages and salaries	50%	30%	20%	100%
Depreciation	30%	20%	40%	100%
Rentals	20%	10%	20%	100%

How much cost, in total, would be allocated in the first-stage allocation to the Assembly activity cost pool?

- $236,000
- $248,750
- $321,500
- $135,000

Allocations to the Assembly activity cost pool:

Wages and salaries (50% = $217,000)	$ 108,500
Depreciation (30% = $207,000)	62,100
Rentals (20% = $119,000)	23,800
Total	$ 248,750
