Gendering Human Security in Afghanistan Ben Walter, 2017-06-14 This book employs the concept of human security to show what the term means from the perspective of women in Afghanistan. It engages with a well established debate in academic and policy making contexts regarding the utility of human security as a framework for understanding and redressing conflict. The book argues that this concept allows the possibility of articulating the substantive experiences of violence and marginalisation experienced by people in local settings as well as their own struggles towards a secure and happy life. In this regard it goes a long way to making sense of the complex dynamics of conflict which have confounded Western policy makers in their ongoing state building mission in Afghanistan. However despite this inherent potential the idea of human security still needs refinement. Crucially it has benefitted from critical feminist and critical social theories which provide the conceptual and methodological depth necessary to apprehend what a progressive ethical program of security looks like and how it can be furthered. Using this framework the work provides a critical reconstruction of the effect of the US led Western Intervention on women's experiences of in security in the three provincial contexts of Nangarhar, Bamiyan and Kabul. This reconstruction is drawn from a wealth of historical and contemporary sociological research alongside original fieldwork undertaken in Delhi, India during 2011 with women and men from the country's different communities. This book will be of much interest to students of human security, state building, gender politics, war and conflict studies and IR in general.

As the powerful nations of the world are mobilized to tackle domestic conflicts and their ensuing refugee problems in the Balkans, the Middle East, Southeast Asia and elsewhere African societies have typically been abandoned by the international community to resolving their own conflicts through their own means. The authors of this volume examine both causes and effects of displacement in terms of both local and global politics, environmental risks, socio-economic costs and policy and identity issues.
