Assignment 10 - Cell & Tissue Physiology: Cnidaria

1. What is a signal transduction pathway? Give an example.

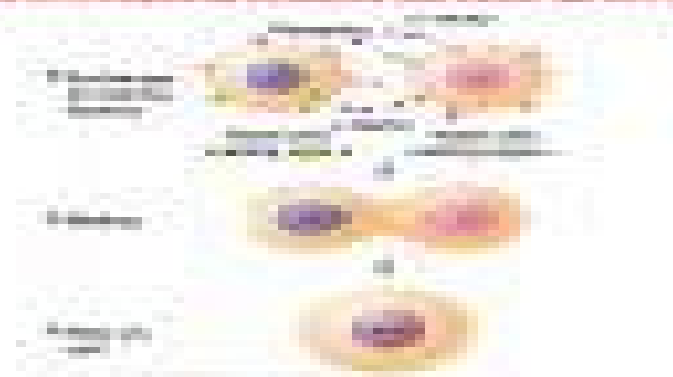

An example of a signal transduction pathway is the pathway that leads to the activation of a protein kinase by a growth factor.

Signal transduction is a process by which a cell converts an external signal into a specific cellular response. The signal is first received by a receptor protein on the cell surface. This receptor then activates a series of intracellular proteins, which eventually lead to the activation of a specific cellular response. The signal transduction pathway is a complex process that involves many different proteins and molecules.

2. What three protein kinases are an example of a signal transduction pathway?

Three protein kinases that are involved in signal transduction are the mitogen-activated protein kinase (MAPK), the phosphoinositide 3-kinase (PI3K), and the Janus kinase (JAK). These kinases are involved in a variety of cellular processes, including cell growth, differentiation, and survival.
