micturition dysfunctions affect millions of people worldwide. Aside from physical and functional problems, these conditions cause social and mental discomfort and affect the well-being of the affected patients due to the difficulty of performing several normal activities in daily life. The mechanisms involved in urinary bladder control are not fully understood and thus available treatments for lower urinary tract disorders are not always effective, representing a challenge in therapeutics and clinics. Also, the etiology of many disturbances affecting the lower urinary tract remains unknown. Despite the fact that classic neural pathways involved in urinary bladder control have been described and accepted up to now and that different local bladder mediators have been identified, additional mechanisms involved in urinary bladder control are presumably important.
