

Drawing Graphs and Conclusions

Two of the most important skills in science are being able to graph experimental data and draw conclusions from that data. To help you improve on these skills, the independent variable is always plotted on the horizontal (x) axis while the dependent variable is always plotted on the vertical (y) axis. Remember to label the axes of your graph including units and to give your graph a title.

Question 1: Using the results in the table below, draw an appropriate graph of the data.

Mass of water (kg)	Temperature change (°C)
0.4	50
0.7	40
0.9	45
1.2	32
1.6	24
2.2	12

Question 2: What is the relationship between the mass of water and the resulting temperature change?

Question 3: Are there any anomalous results? If so, what result would you expect instead?

Sometimes graphs can contain different sets of data that need to be compared. They are however a little bit harder to create. Challenge yourself and see if you can graph the following data.

Question 3: Graph the data in the table below.

Age	Average height of girls	Average height of boys
9	140	140
10	145	143
11	155	147
12	163	155
13	165	166
14	167	175
15	168	177

Question 4: What conclusion can you make from the data?

Question 5: Ethylene is a plant hormone that causes fruit to mature. The data below concerns the amount of time it takes for fruit to mature from the time of its first application.

Amount of Ethylene in ml/m ²	Granny Smith Apples Days to Maturity	Golden Apples Days to Maturity	Red Delicious Apples Days to Maturity
10	14	14	15
15	12	12	14
20	10	9	12
25	8	7	10
30	8	7	8
35	8	6	7

Question 6: Draw a conclusion from your graphed data.
