Useful DOS Commands

Networking

ipconfig - View local IP Configuration

Spooftool will tell you the IP settings for the current computer such as what your current IP is, and what the subnet/gateway you are on. It is great for troubleshooting. Here are the two most useful commands for ipconfig and usage:

ipconfig /all - Shows detailed information about the installed network devices.

ipconfig /release - This will release any IP information that the computer was given and return your IP address back to DHCP.

ipconfig /renew - This will ask any DHCP server (usually your modem/route) for a new IP address.

ping - Checks a connection or computer

Ping is used to check the health of a connection. The ping command will tell you whether a network device is responding and how fast it is running. The ping tool can also be used to convert a URL address into an IP (e.g. `www.google.com = 74.125.23.200`). Usage:

`ping www.google.com` - Ping a website to see if it can be reached or is responding. I personally use this to see if the computer I am on can reach the internet.

`ping 192.168.1.1` - Ping a local address, often a router, modem or connection computer.

netstat - Displays current TCP/IP connections

Netstat - Will display current connections and summarize activities other systems. Useful for spotting programs using ports for their health and usage.

File Management

type - Open text files

Similar to Linux's cat command, this command will display the contents of a text file in DOS as read-only. Usage: `type filename.txt`

attrib - Set file attributes

Attrib can change the attributes of a file, such as whether it is a system file or hidden. This is especially useful for removing unnecessary files from a system. Usage: `attrib -r -s -h filename.txt`

attrib -r -s -h filename.txt

Attrib -s -h filename.txt - This will remove the system file attribute.

For more options with this command, type attrib /?
