Citizen A32 Programming Guide:

Democracy without Citizens Robert M. Entman, 1990-09-27 In this book Professor Entman offers a penetrating critique of American journalism and the political process He identifies what he considers the key dilemma facing today's reporters and editors the catch 22 that prevents the news media from offering in depth quality journalism which would create a sophisticated citizenry because it does not already have a sophisticated audience He continues on to examine the effects and offer possible solutions to this dilemma In the course of his analysis Entman sheds considerable light on such issues as the sources and bias of the news the relations between media and government the FCC's Fairness Doctrine and more
