

Chloroplasts and the Process of Photosynthesis

Q1 What is a typical structure of a chloroplast? (Diagram required)

Chloroplasts are found in plant cells, algae and some protists. They are green, oval-shaped organelles that contain chlorophyll. Chlorophyll is a green pigment that captures light energy and uses it to make glucose. Glucose is a type of sugar that is used for energy.

Q2 What three main things happen in the process of photosynthesis? (Diagram required)

Photosynthesis happens in plant cells, algae and some protists. It is a process that uses light energy to make glucose. The glucose is used for energy. It is also used to make cellulose, which is a type of carbohydrate that is used to make cell walls. Cell walls are made of cellulose microfibrils. Other leafy plants use the glucose to make starch. Starch is a type of glucose that is stored in plant cells for later use. If there is not enough light energy, the plant will not be able to make glucose. If there is not enough glucose, the plant will not be able to make cellulose or starch.
