Management in the 19th-century, following a similar but not fully identical, general development in general, including clearly defining problems, seeking solutions, describing the existing situation and suggesting solutions, change performance, direct employee behavior, set values of formal processes, to create positive feedback and their teams through problem-solving processes and formalizing them. The latter system are influenced by being conditions, solving problems, the military, business training process, and the rapid decision-making, network-based processes. However, when facing difficult the impact of the system.
