

A SHARED MISSION

Direct Instruction

Tell students that this year, they will learn to plan, research, apply for, and make big decisions for themselves through education to the point they have to stay on track one another through.

LESSON EXTENSION

Paper Plane Goals — To demonstrate the importance of planning and using resources, ask for three volunteers to come to the front of the room. Give each volunteer a piece of paper. Tell two volunteers that they need to make a paper plane as fast as they can (give them 30 seconds). Note: they must make planes, not paper balls, crumpled sheets of paper, or other objects.

Tell the final volunteer that they also have to make a paper plane. However, they will have no time limit. After providing this volunteer with some resources to help them — instructions on creating paper airplanes, higher quality paper, paper clips, scotch tape, etc. This third volunteer is also welcome to ask anyone in the room to help them if they so choose.

Give the volunteers time to complete their planes. Designate a target in the room, and then have them toss their planes to see which goes the furthest. As a class, discuss:

- Which plane hit the target or got closest to it? Which plane flew best? Why?
- What does this activity tell us about planning for goals and hitting our targets?

Students should understand that having a plan, having time, and using resources including help and support from others can make reaching a goal easier.

CREATING A MISSION: IDENTIFYING COMMON GOALS AND VALUES

Whole Group Discussion

Creating a Class Mission Statement — Take a moment to review the definition of a mission statement with your students. Explain to students that a mission statement summarizes, succinctly, the shared goals and values of a group. Explain to students that, just like a company or organization, your class needs a clear understanding of its shared goals and values in order to function as a strong team.

» Each lesson is broken down into easy-to-understand steps all students can complete.

peer leader perspective

Introduce Peer Leaders (students who attended a College Summit workshop over the summer) who are in your class. These students completed key elements of the college application process: a college application, a personal statement, a College List while learning important things about leadership and goals achievement.

Peer Leaders to share their experience of navigating the secondary planning and application process at workshop the summer. What did they do there? Which of the steps in this process was easiest for students? Hardest?

STEP 2: Create a Shared Mission Statement

a shared mission

Your College Summit class this year is all about managing the uncertainty of senior year and maximizing your opportunities for success after graduation. This year, you will learn how to:

- PLAN to meet your long- and short-term goals
- RESEARCH on your personal strengths and create products which demonstrate them to colleges and employers
- APPLY to colleges, programs, and training opportunities
- FINANCE your postsecondary plans and apply for financial aid
- ADAPT to the transition from high school student to professional learner or career person
- CONNECT to a postsecondary system by discussing which school, program, or training opportunity to pursue
- TAKE ACTION to ensure you make a successful transition from high school to college or work

As you work through the Navigator, you will also create a College Portfolio, that will contain products and documents you can use to apply to colleges, apply for jobs and internships, apply for scholarships and financial aid, and guide your life after high school. By June, you'll have all the tools you need to confidently make the transition from high school to adulthood. Welcome to your future!

Your College Summit class is a place to work, learn, and share your experiences with your peers. As a group, you will be facing a lot of difficult but rewarding work this year. How you work together is all up to you.

Although you might not share a postsecondary plan with your classmates, chances are you share similar goals about what you want to get out of this class.

creating a mission: identifying common goals and values

Just like a company or an organization, your class will be working together toward a common goal. It's up to you to share your goals, and what you and your classmates value together.

A mission statement tells what a group wants to accomplish, its goals, and why they want to do it (their values).

» Suggestions for making the content relevant to YOUR students.

making it real

Deconstructing Mission Statements — Break students into pairs, and give each pair a mission statement to deconstruct with a partner; they should identify the values of the organization and the organization's goals. Have the pairs share out their opinions with the class. Discuss:

- What does each organization value?
- What business does it hope to overcome?
- What does it hope to achieve?
