

I. What is a Virus?

- A. Non-cellular; simply put: genes in a protein coat; lack metabolic machinery
- B. Lack replication machinery, so they need the host to replicate → obligatory parasites!
- C. Major cause of disease across all domains
- D. Viruses are small (range between 5-500 nm long).

II. Discovery of Viruses

- A. Tobacco Mosaic Virus (TMV) – first virus isolated
 - 1. Scientists deduced via experimentation that TMV was a biological agent, smaller than bacteria, and needed host to replicate
 - 2. Discovery of TMV highlights logical deductive reasoning of science.

III. Viral Structure

- A. Components
 - 1. Genetic material (RNA or DNA)
 - 2. Capsid – outer shell of virus (the protein coat)
 - a. Capsomer – functional unit of capsid, self assembles into capsid
 - b. virally encoded glycoproteins
 - 3. Envelope – host derived membrane
- B. Types

Helical	Single type of capsomer stacked helically around genetic material creating a rod shape.
Polyhedral	Comprised of numerous equilateral triangular faced capsomers. Sphere shaped.
Envelope	Either a helical or polyhedral virus enclosed in a host-derived membrane.
Complex	Possess aspects of both helical and icosahedral morphologies. We discussed phages as complex virus types

IV. Viral Classification

Baltimore classification based on DNA or RNA as genetic material and the use of sense, strand, and nucleic acid replication intermediates:

- dsDNA (double stranded DNA virus)
- ssDNA (single stranded DNA virus)
- dsRNA (double stranded RNA)
- (+)ssRNA (+sense single stranded RNA)
- (-)ssRNA (-sense single stranded RNA)
- ssRNA-RT (ssRNA reverse transcription)

Though you are not expected to name examples for each type of virus and do not have to know what class number they belong to, you do need to know what the genetic material means for certain steps in the life cycles of these viruses.

Study Guide and Solutions Manual for Organic Chemistry Susan McMurry, 1992 John McMurry's best selling text presents organic chemistry in a new edition that is up to date beautifully written visually striking and pedagogically sound Described by many of its users as an eminently teachable text McMurry sets the standard in the field The writing style has received almost universal acclaim from its users McMurry introduces new concepts only as needed and immediately illustrates them with concrete examples And wherever possible he ties material together with brief reviews overviews and reaction summaries The result is a text that helps students mentally organize the material a text that helps them understand concepts not just memorize facts and a text that helps them make sense of the voluminous amount of material they encounter in the study of organic chemistry McMurry uses a simple but important polar reaction the addition of HBr to an alkene as the lead off reaction to illustrate the general principles of organic reactions Users of former editions found this an excellent choice because of its relative simplicity no prior knowledge of chirality or kinetics is required and its importance as a polar reaction on a common functional group that offers students the key to understanding hundreds of thousands of ionic reactions By selecting this particular model McMurry is able to offer an unusually early presentation of organic reactions
