Estimated Weight - Strength Predictions

Questions 10-11: The following table summarizes the results, corresponding to the following series, used to estimate the strength weight. These 10 strength experiments for the following were the observed test results. All of these tests are linearly correlated to weight, and therefore are also considered "representative" of "representative strength". These experiments were conducted using the following series. Before starting out the experiments, the researcher believed that the strength of the material would not decrease significantly with increasing weight. After the first few trials, the researcher realized that the strength was decreasing with increasing weight. The researcher then decided to continue the experiments until the strength was no longer increasing.
